

glut /glʌt/ noun [singular] ECONOMICS a situation in which there is more of something available to buy than people want or need: a glut of cars on the market gluten /'glu:t(ə)n/ noun [U] HEALTH a sticky protein that is found in some cereals, especially wheat glycerine /'glɪsərɪn, 'glɪsəri:n/ noun [U] CHEMISTRY a thick clear sweet-tasting liquid that is used for making many things, including soap and bombs glycerol /'glɪsərɒl/ noun [U] CHEMISTRY glycerine

glycogen /'glɑɪkədʒən/ noun [U] BIOLOGY a polysaccharide that is found especially in the liver. Muscles use it to release the energy they need.

GM /,dʒi:'em/ adj AGRICULTURE genetically modified: used for describing crops whose genes have been artificially changed, or for describing foods made from these crops